

Surveillance and Control Strategy against COVID-19 after the acute phase of the pandemic.

Camping El Naranjal, informs the client of the procedure to follow in case of presenting symptoms compatible with Covid-19 or between clients.

Among the various changes introduced, the end of the obligation to carry out home isolation for people diagnosed with COVID-19 (or with symptoms compatible) and close living contacts of confirmed cases.

Failing that, the current strategy establishes that these people must:

- *Extreme precautions and reduce social interactions as much as possible using constantly wear the mask and maintain adequate hand hygiene during the 10 days after the onset of symptoms.

- *Especially avoid contact with vulnerable people (over 60 years of age, immunosuppressed and pregnant) and participation in large events.

The client will be informed at all times of the procedure to follow in the event of submitting symptoms compatible with the disease:

Acute respiratory symptoms consistent with sudden onset within the last 10 days of any of the following symptoms: cough, dyspnoea, sore throat or runny nose, with or without fever. Other symptoms such as anosmia, ageusia, diarrhoea, chest pain or headache, among others, can also be considered symptoms of suspected SARS-CoV-2 infection according to criteria clinical.

Therefore, the behaviour to follow will be the following:

In the case of people considered vulnerable with compatible symptoms, go to a health center physician for diagnostic tests.

In case of serious criteria or poor evolution (dyspnoea, fever >38°C maintained more than three days...) contact your doctor or the health system, observing in any case all personal transmission control measures and using, if possible, a means of private transport in the event of displacement.

Since this is a communicable disease, and a client affected with mild symptomatology should restrict social interactions for 10 days (including, both journeys by means of transport and access to catering establishments), the facility will provide:

- *The extension of stays, if necessary, particularly if the return of the client to his habitual residence is carried out by collective transport.
